RELEASE NO. 1591 "HAWAIIAN PINEAPPLES" TERRY-TOONS

1 Reel

Four Hawaiian maidens in straw skirts sway to the music of guitars. Three mice glide along on short planks over mountainous seas. Even the tall palm trees bend to music. A native girl dances to the strains of a huge guitarist strumming a similarly huge guitar. The sea-going mice land and promptly indicate their joy by dancing. A line-full of underclothes develops a sudden rhythmic animation. A piccolo player, very much a dandy, proceeds blithely along the road, until he is spotted by a monkey who has been cavorting on a branch of a cocoanut tree. With sure aim, the monkey hurls a cocoanut at the dude.

With a circle of admiring cats as spectators, a mouse gets his plane in readiness for a flight. He gives his propeller a spin, turns the motor over and taxies along the ground with the crowd of cats running behind.

Four condors, under the leadership of a bicycle-rider, soar through the air. One by one they land on the plane, are chased off, and return again, until in desperation the pilot does a loop-the-loop and sends the unwelcome passengers down to earth.

Sticking his long trunk into a gasoline tank, an elephant drains its contents and promptly flies in the air. He encounters the mouse and his plane, and proceeds to extract the gasoline from the plane. The ship begins to fall, and losing his control, the mouse sails straight through a volcano. Soon he emerges, minus his plane, aflame. He rushes into a thatched-roof cottage, and dashes out again after setting fire to the house. The occupants flee as the unfortunate mouse heads for the sea. Just on the brink, he falls in a heap, unconscious, but the water fails to touch him.

Rescue is at hand, however. Seated on a whale, a girl makes a frenzied dash for the under-sea fire-fighting apparatus. Their equipment mounted on whales, the firemen rush to the aid of the mouse. The girl is transported to the brink of the shore, and a spout of water, generously emitted by a huge beast, extinguishes the flames. The lovers are again united, and while four Hawaiians go through a hula, the two mice clinch and ride off on the whale's back, out of the picture.
